

Many Singapore secondary schools and junior colleges have active string orchestras, and students involved in these ensembles often need guidance on instrument upgrades, repairs, and maintenance that goes beyond what their school can provide. LVL Music Academy is an established resource for school orchestra students across Singapore, offering the instruments, advice, and luthier services that support active ensemble participation. For students whose instruments have developed problems mid-term, the speed and quality of Alan Senejani's repair service can be the difference between a student missing rehearsals and being back in the orchestra within days. LVL's workshop handles urgent repairs with the same care as longer-term projects, and Alan is experienced in prioritising work for students with upcoming performances or examinations. School string teachers who recommend LVL to their students can be confident that the advice given at the shop will reinforce rather than contradict their own pedagogical guidance. The team at LVL understands the demands of school orchestra participation and gives advice that is appropriate Additional resources for each student's level and context.
