

A Auto Express has been a working part of the Raytown community since 2008. For a locally owned business to remain in operation and grow for over 15 years in a market that includes national chains and dealership service centers, the service has to be genuinely worth choosing. The community relationship A Auto Express has built is visible in how customers describe the shop. Neighbors recommend it to neighbors. Customers who moved away from Raytown continue to bring their vehicles back. Families that started using the shop in 2008 have multiple generations of household vehicles serviced there. This kind of community relationship is built on trust, and trust is built on consistent honest service over time. Barry Morton opened A Auto Express on a founding commitment to treat every customer like family, and that commitment has been the standard the shop upholds through every interaction since.
