

Engagement ring trends evolve while certain classic choices remain perennial. For Chicago couples shopping at dimend SCAASI in 2026, here is a picture of what is currently popular and what continues to endure. Oval diamonds remain among the most requested shapes. The elongated silhouette flatters most hand types, the apparent size for carat weight is favorable, and the shape suits both vintage-inspired and contemporary settings. dimend SCAASI has extensive experience with oval diamonds across a full range of settings. Lab-grown diamonds have moved from a niche choice to a mainstream option. Increased awareness and acceptance of lab-grown stones among younger buyers, combined with the significant price difference from mined diamonds of equivalent quality, has made them a primary consideration for a growing proportion of dimend SCAASI's customers.

Colored gemstone engagement rings have grown in popularity alongside traditional diamond rings. Sapphire, emerald, and morganite center stones with diamond accents create rings that are distinct and personal. dimend SCAASI works with colored gemstones as well as diamonds and can create custom designs around any center stone choice. Unique and vintage-inspired designs continue to find strong audiences. The desire for a ring that looks like nothing else available in a standard retail setting drives many custom design consultations at the store. Milgrain detailing, engraved bands, and mixed-metal designs are all consistent requests. Minimalist solitaire settings have returned to favor alongside more elaborate designs. A beautifully cut diamond in a simple four-prong setting prioritizes the stone itself and suits wearers who prefer understated elegance. Whatever direction current trends point, the team at dimend SCAASI guides customers toward what suits them personally rather than what is fashionable in the abstract.
